Financial Disclosures: Dr Grinspoon reported having served as a consultant for EMD Serono, Theratechnologies, Stratum Medical, and Hoffman LaRoche, and having received research support from Theratechnologies, EMD Serono, Bristol-Myers Squibb, and GlaxoSmithKline. Dr Grinspoon also reported having provided expert testimony before a Food and Drug Administration advisory panel as the principal investigator of a study of growth hormone releasing hormone. Ms You reported having received salary support from Genentech for an unrelated project. No other disclosures were reported.

Role of the Sponsor: The funding organizations approved the study and its design but had no role in the conduct of the study; in the collection, management, analysis, and interpretation of the data; or in the preparation, review, or approval of the manuscript. EMD Serono provided growth hormone and placebo but did not provide funding for the study.

Funding/Support: The study was funded by grants R01 DK63639 (S.G.), K23 HL092792 (J.Lo), M01 RR01066, and 1 UL1 RR025758 from the National Institutes of Health; by the Harvard Clinical and Translational Science Center; and by the National Center for Research Resources. EMD Serono provided growth hormone and placebo but did not provide funding for the study.

Additional Contributions: Jeffrey Wei, BA, Massachusetts General Hospital Program in Nutritional Metabolism, helped with data collection and analysis. Mr Wei did not receive compensation for his role in the study.

CORRECTION

Unreported Potential Competing Interest: In the book review of Acute Care Surgery: A Guide for General Surgeons, published in the June 9, 2010, issue of JAMA (2010;303[22]:2299-2300), information about a potential competing interest should have been reported. On page 2300, after the Financial Disclosures section, the following information should have been included: “Additional Information: Dr Alam is a faculty member of the academic division in which Dr Velmahos, one of the 4 editors of the book he reviewed, is the division chief.”
