CORRECTION

Typographical Error and Added Reference: In the Viewpoint entitled “Physician-Assisted Dying: A Turning Point?” published in the January 19, 2016, issue of JAMA, there was an error in the text. In the first paragraph under the heading “Turning Point in Social and Ethical Thought,” the first sentence should read that the poll was conducted in 2014, not 2015. This same sentence also requires a reference, which was added. This article was corrected online.

Unclear Information in Table: In the Review article entitled “Benefits and Harms of Breast Cancer Screening: A Systematic Review,” published in the October 20, 2015, issue of JAMA, a reference number was omitted from a Table, and related wording was ambiguous. In Table 3, first row of the “Quality Considerations” column, the wording “Cochrane review9 included all trials; US study not included” should have read “Cochrane review9 did not include US study.” This article was corrected online.

Incorrect Data in 2 Tables: In the Special Communication entitled “Breast Cancer Screening for Women at Average Risk: 2015 Guideline Update From the American Cancer Society,” published in the October 20, 2015, issue of JAMA, incorrect data were given in some cells of Tables 3 and 4. In Table 3, the exposure for the randomized clinical trials row should have been invitation to screening mammography. In the first row of Table 4, the absolute breast cancer risk originally provided was not the 5-year risk for that age group. This article has been corrected online.

Guidelines for Letters

Letters discussing a recent JAMA article should be submitted within 4 weeks of the article’s publication in print. Letters received after 4 weeks will rarely be considered. Letters should not exceed 400 words of text and 5 references and may have no more than 3 authors. Letters reporting original research should not exceed 600 words of text and 6 references and may have no more than 7 authors. They may include up to 2 tables or figures but online supplementary material is not allowed. All letters should include a word count. Letters must not duplicate other material published or submitted for publication. Letters not meeting these specifications are generally not considered. Letters being considered for publication ordinarily will be sent to the authors of the JAMA article, who will be given the opportunity to reply. Letters will be published at the discretion of the editors and are subject to abridgement and editing. Further instructions can be found at http://jama.com/public/InstructionsForAuthors.aspx. A signed statement for authorship criteria and responsibility, financial disclosure, copyright transfer, and acknowledgment and the ICMJE Form for Disclosure of Potential Conflicts of Interest are required before publication. Letters should be submitted via the JAMA online submission and review system at http://manuscripts.jama.com. For technical assistance, please contact jama-letters@jamanetwork.org.
