Mission Statement. JAMA Dermatology’s mission is to elevate the art and science of health and diseases of skin, hair, and mucous membranes, and to advance dermatology’s role in delivering evidence-based, high-value medical and surgical dermatologic care. The journal publishes a broad range of innovative studies and trials that shift research and clinical practice paradigms, expand the understanding of the burden of dermatologic diseases and key outcomes, improve the practice of dermatology, and ensure equitable care to all patients. The journal also features research and opinion examining ethical, moral, socioeconomic, educational, and political issues relevant to dermatologists to enable ongoing improvement to the workforce, scope of practice, and the training of future dermatologists. The journal is in development initiatives to increase diversity, equity, and inclusion within the specialty and within dermatology medical publishing.
