Error in Acknowledgments: In the article titled “Sugar Industry and Coronary Heart Disease Research: A Historical Analysis of Internal Industry Documents,”1 by Kearns, Schmidt, and Glantz, published online September 12, 2016, the name of a funding source was omitted. The Funding/Support paragraph should have also included the following sentence: “We also thank Gary Taubes, MS, co-founder of Nutrition Science Initiative, for providing funding for travel to the Harvard Medical Library.”

Incorrect Funding Source Listed: In the article titled “Antidepressant Prescription in the Geriatric Population: A Teachable Moment”1 there was an error in the end matter regarding funding for the work. It previously read “This work was supported through the Janssen Academic Mentorship Program and the American Psychiatric Association Research Colloquium,” when in fact there were no funders for the work. This sentence and the role of the erroneous funder have been removed.

Error in Graph Line Labels: In the Original Investigation by Graham et al titled “Stroke, Bleeding, and Mortality Risks in Elderly Medicare Beneficiaries Treated With Dabigatran or Rivaroxaban for Nonvalvular Atrial Fibrillation,” published online October 3, 2016, in JAMA Internal Medicine,1 the graph lines in Figure 1, panels B, C, and D, were mislabeled. In all graphs, the blue lines correctly indicate rivaroxaban, and the black lines correctly indicate dabigatran. This article was corrected online.
