the meantime, we hope we can all agree that long-term surveillance is important in young patients with uveal melanoma.

Zélia M. Corrêa, MD, PhD
James J. Augsburger, MD

Author Affiliations: Wilmer Eye Institute, Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, Baltimore, Maryland (Corrêa); Department of Ophthalmology, College of Medicine, University of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio (Corrêa, Augsburger).

Corresponding Author: Zélia M. Corrêa, MD, PhD, Wilmer Eye Institute, Ophthalmology, Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, 600 N Wolfe St, Maumenee 711, Baltimore, MD 21287-9277 (zcorrea@jhmi.edu).

Published Online: July 18, 2019. doi:10.1001/jamaopthalmol.2019.2552

Conflict of Interest Disclosures: Dr Corrêa reported personal fees from Castle Biosciences outside the submitted work. No other disclosures were reported.
