CORRECTION

Error in Coding of Sex Variable in Text and Tables: In the Original Investigation “Association of Task-Shared Psychological Interventions With Depression Outcomes in Low- and Middle-Income Countries: A Systematic Review and Individual Patient Data Meta-analysis,”1 published Online First on March 23, 2022, and in the May issue of JAMA Psychiatry, the numbers related to sex (ie, percentages and moderator analysis figures) were reported incorrectly in the text and tables because of a coding error.

In the subsection Participant Characteristics, the sentence should read, “Among the 4145 participants, the mean (SD) age was 33 (9.8) years, 3438 (83%) were female....” The β coefficients and SEs for sex are now slightly different in Table 2 and Table 3. This article was corrected online.

jamapsychiatry.2022.0301